

Audit finds sloppy record keeping in Christina

Auditors have found more financial missteps in the Christina School District. A probe of the district's cafeteria fund found sloppy business practices, work awarded without contracts and questionable reimbursements for expenses -- including cell-phone and alcohol purchases. State Auditor Tom Wagner says the findings show a continuous pattern of poor business practices and poor record keeping in the district. Christina officials say the new administration is tightening business practices and making policy changes. The new findings come just months after an audit found the district was operating under an eight-figure deficit. Copyright 2006 Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten, or redistributed.

Copyright © Sep 07, 2006, WDEL/Delmarva Broadcasting Company. All Rights Reserved.
Advanced permission from Delmarva Broadcasting Company required for publication or rebroadcast.